PUBLICATIONS: Divide publications or creative works into one of three areas: (I) teaching, (II) research or creative activities, or (III) service. List publications only once, even if a publication might be applicable to more than one area. Refereed works should be noted. Publications should be numbered sequentially within each of the three sections. Earliest publication should be listed first; most recent publication should be listed last for each category.

Authors should be listed as they appear in publication. The exact status of each publication should be noted if the status is ambiguous. For example, articles which have been officially accepted by an editor or publisher should be identified as "in press." Articles which have been submitted for editorial review, but which have not been accepted or which have been accepted subject to revision should be identified as "submitted" or "under editorial review." Work in preparation should not be listed in vitae. Projected work or work in progress should be reported in the appropriate section of the dossier. Note publications in APA format.
