THE 2018 CHANCELLOR'S SCHOLARS WORDS OF RECOGNITION AND APPRECIATION

Nabil Adra, Graduate School — Master's Program

Nabil Adra, M.D., completed his Hematology/Medical Oncology fellowship at Indiana University's Department of Medicine while enrolled in the M.S. degree program. He is currently assistant professor of clinical medicine at the Melvin and Bren Simon Cancer Center. He is a young clinical investigator who plans to focus his career on translational research in the field of genitourinary (GU) oncology. His focus is clinical trials in prostate, testis, bladder, and kidney cancer. Dr. Adra has completed clinical trials in GU cancers, presented at national conferences, published findings from his studies in reputable journals, and submitted numerous career type funding proposals.

Sarah Bahr, School of Liberal Arts

Sarah Bahr will earn degrees in English, Spanish, and journalism, with minors in literature and women's studies. Sarah serves as senior editor of Genesis literary magazine, a reporter for the Campus Citizen, a University Writing Center consultant, and an ambassador for the school. Named the statewide Outstanding College Student of Spanish, her publications (in English) include articles in Hektoen International, a medical humanities journal; Forbes Travel Guide; the Indianapolis Star; and Indianapolis Monthly. She reported from this year's Rose Bowl parade and game and, next summer, Sarah will be a Pulliam Fellow for the Indianapolis Star.

Hannah Bocik, School of Public and Environmental Affairs

Hannah Bocik possesses a sincere curiosity and allows herself to be challenged without being discouraged from difficult academic materials. She consistently impresses SPEA faculty, staff, and fellow students with her work ethic, ambition, and drive for intellectual rigor. She is invested in theoretically mastering concepts of leadership and management, while also living out these concepts through volunteer trips in support of orphans and children with special needs. Ms. Bocik's commitments demonstrate that she understands the impact of leadership and is enthusiastically and passionately willing to accept the responsibilities that are associated with being a true leader in her community.

Jared Emenhiser, School of Physical Education and Tourism Management

We are pleased to recognize Jared Emenhiser as PETM's Chancellor's Scholar this year. Kinesiology faculty Dr. Zach Riley says, "Mr. Emenhiser displays academic maturity far above that of his peers and understands the value of representing himself and his school through his impressive scholarly activity." Those that know him also appreciate that he's humble and approachable. He is well-liked and respected by his peers and highly regarded by his instructors. Congratulations to Jared!

Micah Faidley, School of Science

Micah Faidley will graduate in May 2018 with a Bachelor of Arts in psychology. In addition to his coursework, Micah has volunteered in the Indianapolis area as a tutor and as a mentor, served as president of the IUPUI chapter of the Psi Chi Honor Society, and worked as a peer mentor for Introduction to Psychology (PSY-B110). He has been active in clinical research including working in Dr. Tamika Zapolski's Prevention Research in Substance Use and Minority Health (PRISM) lab; with Dr. Jill Fodstad at Riley Children's Hospital; and with Dr. Shelley Johns at the Regenstrief Institute. Micah has presented his research in local, state, and national conferences and is excited to continue his education this fall, pursuing a Ph.D. in clinical psychology with the goal of developing culturally-relevant intervention programs for marginalized children, adolescents, and young adults.

Lifan Fan, Herron School of Art and Design

Lifan Fan is a skilled and visionary painter, exhibits high-level research abilities, and academic excellence in all areas of her artistic career. She regularly participates in school and campus-level academic and co-curricular activities. She is one of the few double degree seekers in Herron, crossing over with pre-professional medicine and also obtaining a chemistry minor. She regularly receives scholarship recognition from her faculty, attesting to her excellence in her artistic work. She is an example to her peers for attaining a holistic and successful academic experience at IUPUI.

Abigail Hadley, IUPUI Honors College

Abigail Hadley is an outstanding leader at IUPUI and in the Indianapolis community. The variety and depth of involvement she has pursued during her undergraduate career, all while achieving a 4.0 GPA in rigorous pre-medical school curricula in the Schools of Science and Liberal Arts, make her an ideal Chancellor's Scholar. From medical research, to peer mentoring, to volunteering in multiple local hospitals, to being the chair of the IU Student Outreach Clinic and vice president of Timmy Global Health, Abigail is a formidable force for good both locally and internationally.

Lori Haggard, IUPUC

This year's exemplary Chancellor's Scholar, Lori Haggard, represents the unity of both science and liberal arts by completing double majors in psychology, as well as English creative writing. She completed a psychology research project which helps understand how creative activity affects mood and emotion, and she is also writing two murder/suspense novels. Lori won the IUPUC Robert G. Traylor Creative Writing Contest and Scholarship, and has had her work published in Talking Leaves, the campus literary magazine all while still maintaining a 4.0 GPA in all her coursework. What impresses us most about Lori is that even though she could rest on her laurels in any class, she is the first person to assist other students with her generosity of spirit. Campus faculty noticed Lori's nurturing disposition and invited her to be a Supplemental Instruction assistant. Lori nurtures her family, too, and raises bunnies in Brown County. Lori Haggard is truly representative of the best of our students.

Lindsay Hammack, Graduate School — Doctoral Program

Lindsay Hammack received her Ph.D. in the lab of Dr. Andrew Kusmierczyk studying the assembly of the proteasome, an important drug target that is responsible for the majority of protein degradation. She did an outstanding job tackling a difficult project, building multiple yeast strains, making numerous mutants, and essentially bringing her projects to life. She not only has “good lab hands,” she has great lab brains, and her scientific discoveries are challenging our fundamental understanding of this intricate piece of cellular machinery.

Sarah Jacobs, School of Health and Rehabilitation Sciences

Sarah Jacobs has excelled as a student-athlete, both in the classroom and on the soccer field, achieving a 4.0 GPA. The rigors of being a student and athlete challenged her to work harder than she ever had before. After graduation, Sarah plans to apply to graduate school to become a physician assistant. She states, “I have no doubt that IUPUI has prepared me to succeed in my future endeavors.”

Liesel Jaeger, Lilly Family School of Philanthropy

Liesel Jaeger has not only been an outstanding student, but is also an active member of her school and her community. She completed her internship with Agape Therapeutic Riding Resources, where she served as a management and development intern. She has also been involved with Timmy Global Health and Morning Dove Therapeutic Riding Center. She is a member of the IUPUI Honors College and is graduating after only three years. She received the Chancellor’s Scholarship when she came to IUPUI. She is an excellent representative of IUPUI and the Lilly Family School of Philanthropy.

Justin Jones, Robert H. McKinney School of Law

Justin Jones earned the number one rank in his class while working full-time, completing an M.B.A. at Ball State University, and attending law school in the evenings. During law school, he worked as a summer associate and law clerk at Bingham Greenebaum Doll LLP and a judicial extern to Indiana Supreme Court Chief Justice Loretta H. Rush and United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana Chief Judge Jane E. Magnus-Stinson. After graduation, Justin will be joining Bingham Greenebaum Doll LLP as an associate in the Indianapolis office.

Marc Jones, School of Informatics and Computing

We are honored to have Marc Jones as our 2018 Chancellor’s Scholar. Marc is an excellent example of our informatics students. Marc serves the IUPUI community by acting as a peer tutor, giving presentations to potential students and their families, studying abroad, and being involved in our undergraduate student focus groups. Marc is the kind of student you can always count on to be mature, social, and open-minded. He is a very respectful, professional, and driven individual, who will do great things in life.

Jun Lin, School of Engineering and Technology

An outstanding student in the five-year B.S./M.S. program in electrical and computer engineering, Jun Lin excels both academically and in his research endeavors. His research mentor, Stanley Chien, characterizes Jun as one of the best he's ever seen. Jun presents and champions new ideas and approaches in their research so effectively that he convinces Dr. Chien to change his position. Jun is an absolute pleasure to work with: dedicated, hard-working, and always positive. The School of Engineering and Technology is pleased to honor Jun as a Chancellor's Scholar.

Julia Moeller, School of Education

Julia Moeller exudes passion, care, and excellence in all that she does—as a student, a preservice teacher, and as a friend and colleague. She is devoted to working alongside urban students and teachers to make schooling more equitable and culturally sustaining for all students.

Valerie Ostrowski, School of Medicine Health Professions Programs

Valerie Ostrowski is an extraordinary student who consistently strives for excellence throughout her studies in the School of Medicine Radiation Therapy Program. Her academic prowess, research skills, and clinical expertise are a representation of her commitment to her success and the improvement of those whose lives are affected by cancer. Her program faculty are proud to support and encourage Valerie as she continues her education next year in medical dosimetry.

Sylvia Phillips, Division of Undergraduate Education

Sylvia Phillips is pursuing a degree in nursing with a minor in health psychology. She arrived at IUPUI having already accumulated 30+ dual credit hours in high school. Sylvia has always been passionate about helping others, listening to their needs, and working to make people feel better and more comfortable. She wants to be a positive figure within healthcare: someone who seeks out the voices that aren't heard and attends to those who have been forgotten within the system. She plans to continue studies after graduation to obtain a doctorate degree in anesthesiology.

Daniel Robinson, School of Medicine M.D. Program

As the top student in his medical school class of 321, Daniel Robinson is not only brilliant, he has contributed to the advancement of his peers and the medical sciences. During medical school, Daniel was both a dedicated peer mentor and a peer tutor. He served as a pathology teaching assistant and developed educational videos to assist classmates in gaining a more comprehensive understanding of challenging foundational science concepts. Daniel completed a basic science research project in pediatric oncology and clinical research projects in both ophthalmology and orthopedic surgery. Daniel exemplifies the type of IUPUI student that makes us all proud.

Stuart Ryan, School of Dentistry

Stuart Ryan was a superb dental student at the School of Dentistry. He was ranked among the top two-to-three dental students in his class and his stellar academic career has continued as a graduate student in orthodontics. His research as a dental student won several national awards and he was able to publish his work in a well respected international journal. In addition, he served as the editor of an award winning newsletter for the School of Dentistry Student Research Group. He plans on pursuing orthodontics in the Indianapolis area after graduation.

MacKenzie Stratton, Kelley School of Business

MacKenzie Stratton is an extremely self-driven student with truly engaging enthusiasm and penchant for asking 'why'. Her intellectual curiosity coupled with her daily immersion in our iAbroad experience created a positive view of Kelley students with our international professors and guides. MacKenzie is very thankful for her parents and fiancé for their support especially when she was very stressed.

Andrea Timmers, School of Social Work

Andrea Timmers exemplifies the values and ethics of the social work profession. She is committed to using her knowledge and skills to make a difference for others. Andrea's consistent and exceptional performance in the classroom and agency settings serves as a great foundation upon which she will build her social work career.

Marie Venckeleer, School of Nursing

A model student, Marie Venckeleer has achieved an outstanding scholastic record while balancing the responsibilities of being a full-time nursing student and working as a patient care technician in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU). Throughout her college career, she made time to volunteer for the Family Support Program at St. Vincent Hospital, a cause she strongly believes in to help many of the NICU families get through the stressors of hospitalization. Upon graduation, Marie plans to seek out a position as a NICU nurse and eventually return to school to earn a M.S.N. as a nurse practitioner in neonatology.

Korissa Waelbroeck, Richard M. Fairbanks School of Public Health

Korissa Waelbroeck graduated in December 2017 with a Bachelor of Science in public health (B.S.P.H.) degree. She earned an outstanding GPA in her community health major and sociology minor while playing Division I volleyball for the IUPUI Jaguars. She excelled in her internship at the Vanderburgh County Health Department where she conducted community health needs assessment mapping. Kori served as a teaching assistant for the Fairbanks School of Public Health and an academic mentor for the Bepko Learning Center. She is continuing her education at IUPUI in the Master of Public Health Program with a concentration in epidemiology.
